NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION

TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that, on October 20, 2015 at 10:00 a.m., or at any other date and time as the Court may order, before the Honorable Paul S. Grewal, in Courtroom 5, Robert F. Peckham Federal Building & United States Courthouse, 280 South 1st Street, San Jose, CA 95113, Plaintiff, ADAPTIX, Inc. (“Adaptix”), will move the Court under Rules 52(b) and 59(e).

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion and the Motion, and such other matters as the Court may deem appropriate. By this Motion, as addressed in detail below, Adaptix seeks to alter or

1 amend the judgements entered on August 24, 2015.

2 RULE 59(e) MOTION OF ADAPTIX

3 Adaptix moves to alter or amend the findings entered on August 21, 2015 (Dkt. 44) and the 4 judgments entered on August 24, 2015 (Dkt. 45¹), which had been based on portions of the Court's
5 August 21 Order (Dkt. 44) finding claim preclusion. The Court must alter the findings and judgments
6 because, on August 28, 2015, in Dow Chemical Co. v. Nova Chemicals Corporation (Canada), No.
7 2014-1431, 2015 WL 5060947 (Fed. Cir. Aug. 28, 2015), a panel of the United States Court of 8 Appeals for the Federal Circuit issued a decision on claim preclusion that overruled this Court's 9 position.

10 I. Dow held that claim preclusion does not apply to claims for continuing conduct 11 after the complaint was filed.

12 Adaptix brought these Wave 3 actions for conduct after the filing of the complaint in the Wave
13 1 actions. In dismissing these actions, this Court held that claim preclusion applied to new acts of 14 infringement, i.e., post final judgment in a second suit. (Dkt. 44 at 14-15.) Based on that finding, the 15 Court dismissed these Wave 3 actions because the final judgment in the Wave 1 cases created claim
16 preclusion as to these Wave 3 cases. (Dkt. 44 at 18-22.)

17 A contrary finding, that claim preclusion would not apply, however, would remove the basis
18 for dismissing these Wave 3 actions. In the Dow decision, issued seven days after this Court's Order,
19 the Federal Circuit rejected this Court's position:

20 The doctrine of claim preclusion does not apply as between the claims for the 21 first and second damages periods. It is well-established that, as to claims
22 for continuing conduct after the complaint is filed, each period
23 constitutes a separate claim.⁴ See 18 Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller
24 & Edward H. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4409 (2d ed. 2002)
25 (“A substantially single course of activity may continue through the life of a
26 first suit and beyond. The basic claim-preclusion result is clear: a new claim 27 or cause of action is created as the conduct continues.”); Crowe v. Leeke, 550
F.2d 184, 187 (4th Cir.1977) (“We glean from the[] cases that res judicata [claim preclusion] has very little applicability to a fact situation involving a continuing series of acts, for generally each act gives rise to a new cause of action.”); Exhibitors Poster Exchange, Inc. v. Nat'l Screen Serv. Corp., 421 F.2d 1313, 1316, 1318–19 (5th Cir.1970) (res judicata [claim preclusion] does not apply where plaintiff alleges “same facts—[a] 1961 refusal to deal
[as an antitrust violation]”—but sought in a second and third suit to recover

28 ¹ To simplify, this Motion refers only to docket entries in the -364 action.

damages suffered since losing on summary judgment in the first suit since the damages arose from “non actions” subsequently occurring).

This rule applies to patent infringement claims. As we explained just last year, traditional notions of claim preclusion do not apply when a patentee accuses new acts of infringement, i.e., post-final judgment, in a second suit—even where the products are the same in both suits. Such claims are barred under the general preclusion principles only to the extent they can be barred by issue preclusion, with its attendant limitations.

Brain Life, LLC v. Elekta Inc., 746 F.3d 1045, 1056 (Fed.Cir.2014); see Aspex Eyewear, Inc. v. Marchon Eyewear, Inc., 672 F.3d 1335, 1342–44 (Fed.Cir.2012); see also, e.g., SynQor, Inc. v. Artesyn Techs., Inc., 709 F.3d 1365, 1385–86 (considering whether intent element of induced infringement had been shown in the supplemental damages period).

... [I]t is clear that claim preclusion also does not apply to damages accruing after the filing of the complaint and not the subject of the first judgment.

⁴ Likewise, claims that have accrued at the time of the complaint generally must be brought together, and the plaintiff need not supplement the complaint to cover continuing conduct. 18 Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Edward H. Cooper, Federal Practice and Procedure § 4409 (2d ed. 2002) (“Most cases rule that an action need include only the portions of the claim due at the time of commencing that action, frequently observing that the opportunity to file a supplemental complaint is not an obligation.”); see also, e.g., Gillig v. Nike, Inc., 602 F.3d 1354, 1363 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (res judicata [claim preclusion] does not apply where claims accrue during action and are not the subject of the first judgment because “the doctrine of res judicata does not punish a plaintiff for exercising the option not to supplement the pleadings with an after- acquired claim” (citations omitted)); Spiegel v. Cont’l Ill. Nat’l Bank, 790 F.2d 638, 646 (7th Cir. 1986) (claim preclusion barred suit except for claims related to two new acts which “occurred after the filing” of the earlier suit). (Emphasis added.)

Dow Chem., 2015 WL 5060947, at *3 (Fed. Cir. Aug. 28, 2015)(emphasis added).

II. The Court must follow Dow, because the Newell rule does not apply.

In its Order, the Court did not follow Aspex Eyewear, Inc. v. Marchon Eyewear, Inc., 672 F.3d 1335, 1343-45 (Fed. Cir. 2012) and Brain Life, LLC v. Elekta Inc., 746 F.3d 1045, 1053-54 (Fed. Cir. 2014). The Order cited inconsistency between the holdings of Aspex and Brain Life and the “principles elaborated in” dicta from Nystrom v. Trex Co., 580 F.3d 1281, 1285-86 (Fed. Cir. 2009). This Court cited Newell v. Kenney Mfg. Co., 864 F.2d 757 (Fed. Cir. 1988), as having adopted the rule that prior panel decisions bind subsequent panels until overturned en banc. (Dkt. 44 at 14.)

But the Court must follow Dow, which applied Aspex, because the Newell rule does not apply.

A. The Newell rule applies only to direct conflict between decisions.

“Where there is direct conflict, the precedential decision is the first.” Newell, 864 F.2d at 765

(emphasis added). This is how Newell stated the rule. Also, General Protecht Group, Inc. v. Leviton Mfg. Co., Inc., 651 F.3d 1355, 1363 (Fed. Cir. 2011) (“a direct conflict of panel opinions ... is necessary to invoke this court’s rule of precedence.”) (emphasis added).

Dow properly followed Aspex, as Aspex did not directly conflict with Nystrom. The panel in Aspex did not disagree with the result in Nystrom, but simply held the Nystrom opinion had mistakenly referred to issue preclusion, the doctrine being applied, as claim preclusion.² (This Court, in its Order, did not contest that the Nystrom panel had actually used the wrong language.)

Dow properly followed the instruction in Johnston v. IVAC Corp., 855 F.2d 1574, 1579 (Fed. Cir. 1989): “Where conflicting statements... appear in our precedent, the panel is obligated to review the cases and reconcile or explain the statements, if possible.” Dow’s review of Aspex would have observed that the latter decision reconciled and explained what this Court’s Order described as an “inconsistency.”

B. The Newell rule does not apply where the allegation of conflict was previously resolved.

This limitation appears in Autogenomics, Inc. v. Oxford Gene Technology Limited, 566 F.3d 1012, 1020 (Fed. Cir. 2009) (“The dissent suggests that this reading of Avocent renders it in conflict with other precedent of this court. The court in Avocent, however, considered and distinguished the very precedent that the dissent cites.”).

Here, Dow properly followed Aspex because Aspex “considered and distinguished the very precedent that the” Defendants here had cited.

C. The Newell rule does not apply to dicta from an earlier decision.

Several cases have excluded dicta from the Newell rule. Johnston, 885 F.2d at 1579 (not obligated to follow earlier case with “merely conflicting dicta”); Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A. v. DeKalb Genetics Corp., 271 F.3d 1081, 1086 (Fed. Cir. 2001), vacated on other grounds, 284 F.3d 1323 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (“we are not bound by dictum in earlier cases”); Orenshteyn v. Citrix Systems, Inc., 691 F.3d 1356, 1360-61 (Fed. Cir. 2012) (“the portion of the order in Majorette taking jurisdiction over the attorney fees appears to be dicta as it was unnecessary to decide the case, and hence is not controlling over the present case”).

Dow properly followed Aspex because, as noted in Aspex, the panel in Nystrom reached its decision by applying issue preclusion. As issue preclusion provided an adequate basis for the judgment, the (erroneous) description of “claim” preclusion was unnecessary to the judgment, and thus dicta.

D. The Newell rule does not apply where the first case did not squarely address the issue.

This limitation is expressed in numerous cases. Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A., 271 F.3d at 1086 (“a decision applying a particular rule is not binding precedent if the issue is not argued or analyzed or discussed by the court”); Orenshteyn, 691 F.3d at 1360-61 (“Generally, when an issue is not discussed in a decision, that decision is not binding precedent.”); United States v. County of Cook, Illinois, 170 F.3d 1084, 1088 (Fed. Cir. 1999) (court not bound by previous decisions transferring less than all claims under 28 U.S.C. §1631, where decisions did not analyze the propriety of such transfer, presumably because issue not raised by either party); Nat’l Cable Television Ass’n, Inc. v. Am. Cinema Editors, Inc., 937 F.2d 1572, 1581 (Fed. Cir. 1991) (“When an issue is not argued or is ignored in a decision, such decision is not precedent to be followed in a subsequent case in which the issue arises.”); Special Devices, Inc. v. OEA, Inc., 269 F.3d 1340, 1346 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (“[I]n Akron, the finality issue was raised neither by the parties nor sua sponte by the court. Because Akron did not confront and decide the same issue, it is not precedent on the question before us.”); UMC Elecs. Co. v. United States, 816 F.2d 647, 654 (Fed.Cir.1987) (premise assumed in earlier cases rejected when issue squarely presented); Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619 (1993) (reaffirming long-standing rule that if a decision does not “squarely address[s] [an] issue a court remains free to address the issue on the merits” in a subsequent case.)

Dow properly followed Aspex because the panel in Nystrom did not address the well-established differences between issue preclusion and claim preclusion. As the panel in Aspex noted, the Nystrom panel applied issue preclusion, but in doing so simply used the wrong terminology. Nothing in either opinion, or any later opinion, suggests that the Nystrom panel was addressing the differences between issue and claim preclusion.

1 III. Dow follows established law.

2 As Dow observed, that a claim for discrete tortious actions occurring after the complaint is 3 filed constitutes a separate claim is well-established. The United States Supreme Court (Lawlor v.
 4 Nat'l Screen Corp., 349 U.S. 322, 328 (1955)); the circuit courts (e.g., Los Angeles Branch NAACP v.
 5 Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist., 750 F.2d 731, 739-40 (9th Cir. 1984) and cases cited in Aspex and
 6 Dow); and the treatises (Arthur R. Miller & Edward H. Cooper, Federal Practice & Procedure §4409
 7 (2d ed. 2002); 18 James Wm. Moore, Moore's Federal Practice §131.23[3][c] (2011)) would all agree
 8 that Dow accurately states the law nationwide as to when claim preclusion would apply to discrete 9 tortious actions.

10 The references in Nystrom to “claim preclusion” were thus obviously mistakes in terminology.
 11 When a party in Aspex opportunistically relied upon those references to argue for claim preclusion, the 12 panel in Aspex acknowledged Nystrom's mistake in terminology, and on that basis distinguished 13 Nystrom. 672 F.3d at 1343-44. Because the mistake in terminology did not affect the outcome in 14 Nystrom, the mistake was dicta. As a number of Federal Circuit decisions, listed above, have held
 15 dicta need not be followed, the panel in Aspex did not need to convene an en banc session to correct
 16 an obvious mistake, irrelevant to the outcome of the prior case. Nor did the panel in Dow need to do
 17 so.³

18 ³ The Order refers, in this context, to a decision of a District Court in Oregon citing the “Foster line 19 of cases,” Foster v. Hallco Manufacturing Co., 947 F.2d 469 (Fed. Cir. 1991) and Hallco
 20 Manufacturing Co. v. Foster, 256 F.3d 1290 (Fed. Cir. 2001), as somehow supporting an order barring 21 Adaptix's pursuit of these actions. (Dkt. 44 at 15, citing Mentor Graphics Corp. v. EVE-USA, Inc., 22 Case No. 10-cv-954-MO, 2014 WL 2533336 (D. Or. June 4, 2014)). The Oregon opinion, however, failed to explain how the Foster cases supported its conclusion. To the contrary, both Foster cases allowed the patent owner to seek remedies for later acts, thus undermining, rather than supporting, the point on which the Oregon case cited these decisions.

23 In the first case, the patent owner counterclaimed for acts of patent infringement that had occurred
 24 after a first case settled “with prejudice.” 947 F. 2d at 473 n. 2,3. The accused infringer did not 25 question the patent owner's right to do so. Rather, the case discussed only whether the with-prejudice settlement precluded the accused infringer from attacking the patent as a defense to that claim.

26 In the second case, the patent owner counterclaimed for royalties on products sold after an earlier case
 27 had settled with prejudice, with the accused infringer agreeing to take a royalty-bearing license. 256
 28 F.3d at 1292-93. Again, the accused infringer did not question the patent owner's right to pursue the counterclaim. Rather, the case discussed whether, in response to that counterclaim, the accused infringer would be allowed to attack the patent or to deny that its new products would infringe, if not licensed. Not only did the Federal Circuit allow the patent owner to pursue relief for later products, but the Federal Circuit decided that if the new products were essentially the same as the old, judgment

1 In any event, this Court should let the Federal Circuit decide for itself how to run its business.
2 Three separate panels have now concluded that correcting Nystrom's mistake in terminology does not
3 require en banc consideration. Procedure aside, there seems little doubt that an en banc panel, if
4 convened, would rubberstamp Dow, Aspex, and Brain Life as to this aspect of claim preclusion
5 doctrine. There thus seems little point in including this issue in the appeal of the Judgements.

6 IV. Applying Dow requires alteration of the grounds for judgment.

7 This Court dismissed the case on separate grounds, claim preclusion and application of the 8 Kessler doctrine. Adaptix does not direct this motion to the Kessler issue, electing to reserve its 9 arguments on that issue for its appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.
10 Adaptix requests, however, that the Court alter or amend its findings and judgments to remove the 11 reliance upon claim preclusion.

12 Conclusion

13 Dow overruled this Court's finding of claim preclusion. The Court must, therefore, alter or 14 amend its August 21 findings and August 24 judgments by removing their reliance upon claim 15 preclusion.

17
18
19
20
21
22
23
24
25
26
27 should be entered for the patent owner on the counterclaim. Id. at 1298.

28 Both of these decisions preceded Nystrom. If, despite Dow, this Court continues to regard Nystrom as barring pursuit of claims for later infringement not otherwise barred by issue preclusion, then Nystrom conflicts with the earlier Foster cases, and this Court should, for that reason, disregard it.
